Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English. Brand new Book. Classics for Your Collection: goo.gl/U80LCr ----- Emma, a young woman in Regency England, lives with her rich, but eccentric widowed father, Henry Woodhouse, in the rural village, of Highbury, always concerned about his health (hypochondriac, in the extreme), and anybody else's, Mr. Woodhouse, constantly giving unwanted advice to his amused friends and relatives, they tolerate the kindly old man. Miss Woodhouse (they're very formal, in those days), is very class conscious, a bit of a snob (but lovable), and will not be friends with people below her perceived rank, the Woodhouse family, is the most prominent in the area, likes matchmaking, her friend and governess Miss Taylor, with a little help from Emma, married Mr.Weston, a close friend of their family, later regretted by both father and daughter, her presence is greatly missed. And her older sister Isabella, earlier had left to be the wife of John Knightley, and moved away, she is lonely. Emma chooses a protege, Harriet Smith, a seventeen year old girl, with an unknown background (illegitimate?), lives in Mrs.Goddard's boarding school for girls, hoping to groom the unfortunate young lady and raise her to a higher position in society. Besides the slightly spoiled Miss Woodhouse, even her friends call her by that name, will have a companion to talk to, Mr.Woodhouse's, company, lacks stimulation, understandably, how much talk about illness, the devoted daughter, or anyone, take? Emma believes she can discover people's emotions, by watching them, know who they love, not true, but that fact doesn't stop the lady from trying to marry off Harriet, thinking her own beaux, really want to marry Miss Smith, instead of her, big mistakes follow, hurt feelings, embarrassing situations, ironically the...
